DR. JAMES N. RULE
Pennsylvania State Superintendent of Public Instruction.

Standing upon soil hallowed by the memory of William Penn, that staunch member of the Quaker faith who founded Pennsylvania, a deed for the site of his country seat, consisting of 9.8 acres known as Pennsbury, along the Delaware river near Tullytown, was presented to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania yesterday by Charles Warner, of the Warner Sand Company. The presentation was made before an audience of several hundred. It occurred in the open air.

The deed was accepted on behalf of the state by Dr. James N. Rule, chairman of Pennsylvania Historical Commission.

Presentation of the deed was one of the features of the observance of the 250th anniversary of the arrival of William Penn in America.

The ceremonies scheduled for three o'clock were somewhat delayed, due to rain which later ceased and permitted the program to be given in full.

Dr. Henry Paul Busch, president of The Welcome Society, was in charge of the ceremonies and in his introductory remarks, spoke as follows:

"The meeting being in order, we are very sorry that the shower has come to interfere at the beginning of it, but it appears as though it is clearing, and as though we might conduct the exercises without further rainfall.

"We are meeting here today to witness the ceremony of the transfer of Pennsbury to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. It is very proper that this should be ceremonious and I am very glad to see such a large audience to help make it so. Places and events of importance in our earlier history should be known and marked in order that their significance may not be lost and even more that they may stir the remembrance and shed light upon the characters and thoughts of men and women, the influence of whose life is still with us.

PENN AND HIS HOME LIFE AT PENNSBURY

Address by Dr. B. F. Fackenthal, Jr., Riegelsville, Pennsylvania, before The Welcome Society of Pennsylvania at Pennsbury, Bucks County, Pa., October 23, 1932.
(First Installment)

Mr. Chairman, friends of the Welcome Society, associates of the Bucks County Historical Society, ladies and gentlemen:

As a Pennsylvania German, living in a section of our county, where there are no so-called Friends, I feel highly honored in being invited to make an historical address on William Penn and his home life here at Pennsbury; it seems rather presumptuous for me to do so, particularly before the Welcome Society of Pennsylvania and my good friends who have for years made intensive studies of the subject assigned to me. This is however one of the penalties, or should I say pleasures attached to my office as president of the Bucks County Historical Society.

As president of that society, I bid you welcome to Bucks county. We are indeed glad to join with your patriotic association, under whose program this two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the coming of William Penn is being celebrated, and assemble with you at this historic place, the country home of our worthy founder and father of what is now a great Commonwealth.

In the outset I want to invite your attention to the two delightful essays on William Penn contained in Vol. I, of the papers of the Bucks County Historical Society, one by Gen. Davis at page 28, the other by Howard M. Jenkins at page 367.

William Penn and his Ancestry

William Penn was born in London October 14, 1644, and was therefore a young man of but 38 years when in 1682 he received from King Charles the Second the grant of land which later became the Province of Pennsylvania, and yet even in those early days he is often referred to as an older man. He was certainly not the clumsy, portly man with a heavy countenance as painted by Benjamin West, but is described as being handsome and comely in person and manners, and always an elegant and accomplished gentleman.

Historians say he was of Welsh descent, and some say his forebears were of the Royal Tudor race, that his great-great-grandfather, who died in 1591, was named John Tudor, and that he was generally called John Pennmunnth, which became corrupted into Penn. His father belonged to the established Church of England, in which William was baptized October 23, 1644, but William, in 1659, at the age of 15 years, while a student in Christ Church College at Oxford, through the preaching and influence of Thomas Loe, became a convert to Quakerism, founded by George Fox, of which persuasion he remained a most enthusiastic and consistent leader over the remainder of his life. This sect was first called "Professors of the Light" or "Children of the Light"; it was not until 1650 that the name of "Quaker" was imposed upon them, and two years later in 1652 they were first referred to as "Friends." The scism of George Keith in 1690, greatly disturbed William Penn.

William Penn Persecuted for his Religious Views

William Penn was a man of parts, and even as a youth an independent thinker, with a strong personality, whose will was inflexible and unyielding, willing to suffer hardships and imprisonment for his convictions. For his refusal to conform to the rules and discipline of Oxford University, or to the established Church of England, or to wear the surplice of a student, and for assaulting other students, stripping them of their robes, he was expelled, and on his return home was beaten by his father and driven from home. A reconciliation took place, and in 1662, at the age of 18 years, his father, the admiral, sent him to France, hoping that the environment and gay life of Paris, might change him, but his two years in Paris had no fascination for him, and he was recalled in 1664. During his residence in France he acquired a knowledge of the French language, and later as the result of two extensive tours through Germany he also acquired the German language. On his return to England from France he entered Lincoln's Inn as a student at law, but fled from London by reason of the great plague of 1665, which experience served to increase his religious zeal. His father

COUPLE AT FALLSINGTON MARRIED 65 YEARS AGO

Only One Attendant of M. Watson Moon and Bride is Now Living

ANNIVERSARY SUNDAY

FALLSINGTON, Oct. 24.—Mr. and Mrs. M. Watson Moon yesterday observed their 65th wedding anniversary.

The couple were married on October 23, 1867, by the Rev. R. J. Swinerton, of Morrisville Presbyterian Church. The bride was Miss Charlotte Greene Mull, of Penns Manor, and the ceremony occurred in the old Mull home. The attendants at the wedding 45 years ago were: Richard J. Brown and Sara M. Runyon, Emma Moon and Scudder Hart, Ella P. Mull and Daniel Moon, Lizzie J. Ball and John Satterthwaite. None of the attendants are now living but Daniel Moon, of Trenton, N. J.

After a sumptuous wedding supper the young couple with their attendants took a trip to the Delaware Water Gap and Stroudsburg, where they were entertained at dinner by the bride's cousins, Dr. and Mrs. Bidlack. Upon their return home a reception was given by the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Moon.

Mr. and Mrs. Moon have passed all their married life in Fallsington, where Mr. Moon and his late father conducted a general store. This is still operated by Mr. M. Watson Moon. Although not in the best of health both Mr. and Mrs. Moon are able to be about.

Mr. Moon is 87 years of age, and Mrs. Moon 88, but they are no longer able to take an active part in the various activities which they formerly enjoyed. They have three daughters, all of whom reside at home.

The groom of 65 years ago has been a member of Bristol Lodge, 25, F. and A. M., for 32 years, and a member of Bristol Lodge of Elks, 970. Mrs. Moon is a member of Fallsington Episcopal Church, and has always taken an interest in the events of the day.

Round Up 14 Youths In Croydon Craps Game

County Detective Russo, Constable Crawford, and Justice of Peace James Laughlin, rounded up 14 youths Saturday night. The group was staging a craps game at State Road and Cedar avenue, the business center of Croydon.

All of the group were brought to the Municipal Building here and given a hearing before Justice Laughlin. Fines were imposed.

It appears that the business men of that section have been complaining about the youths congregating on the corners and interfering with business. Officers were called Saturday night and the raid was the result.

FULL HOUSE

(By "The Stroller")

The Municipal jail had a capacity crowd Saturday night when 21 prisoners and three lodgers spent the night under the watchful eye of the police.

Fourteen of the 21 prisoners were those arrested at Croydon but brought here for hearings and held until fines were paid.

None of the prisoners were charged with very serious offenses except one motorist who was caught Saturday night armed with a pistol when his machine was stopped along the highway by Chief Jones and County Detective Russo.

TWO-DAY TRIAL ENDS; A VERDICT FOR W. W. RUSK

Verdict of $675.99 Against A. Bomgardner, Truck Owner

TRUCK ACCIDENT

Secretary of Keystone Automobile Club Gives Testimony

DOYLESTOWN, Oct. 24.—Deliberating less than a quarter of an hour, a jury late Friday evening returned a verdict of $675.99 in favor of the plaintiff, Wesley W. Rusk, versus Samuel A. Bomgardner, Palmyra truck owner, after a trial which lasted two days.

The original claim was $875, but the final verdict was a compromise due to the alleged depreciation of the car.

Miss Lillian M. Fell, a secretary in the Keystone Automobile Club branch office, here, as a witness for the plaintiff, testified she followed the defendant, who was operating a five ton truck used in the construction of the high-way from Pipersville to the Buckingham pike, from the Mechanicsville road to the bottom of Borough rail.

"He constantly kept on my side of the road and it was only at the foot of the hill that I was able to pass him after having one side of my car off the macadam road. He paid no heed to my horn which I sounded in order to pass him."

According to this witness, the huge truck was going about forty miles an hour along the highway.

Taking the stand in his own behalf, the driver of the truck, Paul Schadler, of Kutztown, who was employed by Samuel A. Bomgardner, of Palmyra, near Harrisburg, testified that his truck made so much noise that he was unable to hear cars coming from the rear.

Prior to the accident Schadler admitted having made only four round trips with his truck. "I knew it was a bad corner, but I was not going more than 13 miles an hour when the plaintiff's car loomed up in front of me. It was too late, had I not swerved his name would be 'Mud' instead of Rusk. I was carrying five tons of stones and the 'push' behind those stones is something to think about on a slippery highway," said Schadler.

Upon cross-examination he admitted he did not want the "stones down his neck" that was why he ploughed into the lawn of the Swartley residence.

Schadler, who has been a truck driver for eight years, stated his truck

SEVERAL ACCIDENTS OF MINOR NATURE

Three Women Have Narrow Escape in Crash at Fallsington

BOY IS STRUCK HERE

The usual number of automobile accidents occurred over the week-end. None of them resulted fatally in this vicinity.

Two Philadelphians were injured and a third escaped with a shaking up yesterday afternoon when the car in which they were riding was forced off the Lincoln Highway near the Fallsington tunnel and turned over in the ditch.

Mrs. Laura Rosen, 29, of 559 North Randolph street, received lacerations and abrasions, and Miss Reba Vinicur, 31, of 2522 West Cumberland street, suffered a broken right shoulder and lacerations of the face and legs. The victims were treated at Mercer Hospital, where Miss Vinicur was held for observation. The driver of the car, Samuel Rosen, was shaken up.

Charles Lyons, former mayor of Fairview, N. J., alleged driver of the machine which forced the Rosen car off the road, failed to stop following the accident. He was halted by park guards on the Roosevelt Boulevard and returned to the South Langhorne Highway Patrol barracks. He declared that he was unaware that he had caused the crash and was released on his own recognizance. Highway Patrolman Hoffleider investigated.

Warner Kubernus, 8, Bath Road, was struck by a car driven by Lorraine Winder, Bristol R. D. 8, Saturday afternoon.

The boy suffered a cut over the right eye and a fractured leg.

The youngster is said to have run across the road giving chase to a bright colored bird.

The child was brought to the Harrison Hospital and given treatment. Miss Winder was released in her own recognizance to await the outcome of the boy's injuries. The case was heard before Justice James Laughlin.

A car operated by Joseph Short, Philadelphia, struck William T. Harbison, 112 Radcliffe street. The child is alleged to have run out from in back of a car parked along the curb. The youngster and his mother were taken

WIN COLUMN IS BROKEN INTO BY ST. ANN'S XI.

Down Milo A. C., 6 to 0, On Sullivan's Field Here Yesterday

BIG CROWD ATTENDS

(By T. M. Juno)

St. Ann's A. A. finally broke into the win column yesterday afternoon on Sullivan's field when they downed the Milo A. C., 6-0, before the largest crowd of the season.

A thirty-yard forward pass, E. Spadaccino to Tullio in the second period scored the winning touchdown for the "Saints" who displayed their best form of the season in defeating the boys from Manayunk.

The interference shown by the Purple and Gold was the best seen on the part of the home club this season and completely swept the visiting team off its feet. St. Ann's made 15 first downs to the invaders' three. Two of the Milo's three first downs were the result of long passes which were completed. The other first down was aided by five yard penalty which incident was the only penalty of the cleanly-fought fray.

The visiting team never threatened the local goal line and with one exception was never in the game. In the third period, a St. Ann's pass was intercepted and the safety man stopped the visiting player from scoring.

"Socks" Seneca, back into the local line-up after missing all season, bore the brunt of the St. Ann's attack while playing the backfield in the third quarter. Seneca carried the pigskin for an average of eight yards every time he smacked the line, and aided St. Ann's in scoring their large number of first downs.

The entire Purple and Gold line showed up well and the Milos had quite a bit of trouble in trying to hit the stonewall defense. In fact, the visitors did nothing but try forward passes and end runs during the entire second half of the battle.

In the second half the Bristol club had the ball within Milo's ten yard line on three different occasions but always failed to carry the oval across that final chalk mark.

Pico, Gilardi and Seneca starred for the winning club, while the captain of the Milo club, Bostick, put up the best battle for his losing club.

GIGANTIC GOVERNMENT AID

One of the most remarkable pages in the history of government aid is being written by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, which, with $3,800,000,000 at its disposal, has been lending at the rate of $5,000,000 a day since last February for the relief of the farmers, railroads, insurance companies, banks, building and loan associations and the millions who have a stake in these institutions. It has no parallel in history anywhere.

Nearly a half million farmers have borrowed for crop production purposes. Banks and trust companies numbering 4,324 have been aided, in addition to 650 building and loan associations, 80 insurance companies and 50 railroads. And when the government lends to these it is helping every depositor, stockholder, bondholder, policyholder and worker.

This amazing program has been carried out without resort to the simple though dangerous expedient of printing millions in new money and without resort to the degrading and demoralizing debt. What the government has done through the R. F. C. is to use its own credit and borrow money to the extent needed, and then to reloan it on good credit and good collateral.

On top of this gigantic piece of relief work the R. F. C. has made large loans to the individual states that their unemployment relief programs may not be interrupted for lack of funds.

A conservative estimate places the number of persons who have benefited by this program at a third of the nation's population.

It may be tragic to lose one's memory, but most of us would like to lose part of it.

There is just so much for everybody. If you dodge your share, there is more for your creditors.

Well, young fellow, has the dear thing selected the present you are going to select for her for Christmas?

If you build a better mouse trap and buy the material on credit, there will be a beaten path to your door all right.

Present Deed for Pennsbury To Historical Commission

create here close to Pennsbury. Historic sentiment held a high place through all this however, and while broad acres were dug into, tossed about and hauled away, the site of the Mansion House remained untouched.

"We must thank the former owners, the VanSivers, for preserving it, as today we thank the Warners for doing the same. There is little left above ground to arrest and hold one's attention. Just below the surface however, plentiful evidence of the past has been found. Further search should be richly rewarded. We are concerned with what Penn actually did here and what he left. That is history. Today that is Dr. Fackenthal's province, not mine. We are also concerned with what we find here. That is before us for our eyes to see. Again we are concerned with what may be made of it. That is a cue for Dr. Rule.

"Pennsbury in the future will hardly remain as we see it today. It would be a delight to see it restored, to see the Mansion House rebuilt, flanked by numerous outbuildings, the terraces and gardens recreated, and the whole given a background of great forest trade. Perhaps this is too much a flight of fancy. Perhaps again it may apply to the Commission and perhaps again it may become fact. It would be worthwhile. I trust these ceremonies today will recall and impress Pennsbury and the visions and ideals of its owner upon us, who are present and no less upon all those millions of inhabitants of Pennsylvania, who are enjoying the benefit of his wisdom and efforts.

Just here I would like to thank very many persons, too many for me to mention names. But I must thank the Bucks County Historical Society, and all those associated with it and the residents of Bucks County for their very earnest enthusiasm on behalf of Pennsbury.

"Mr. Warner, the members of the Welcome Society, look back only some eight or nine generations, to ancestors who are friends of William Penn, who in all probability visited with him here at Pennsbury. We are deeply appreciative of the part we have been permitted to play in this ceremony; we are deeply appreciative of the generosity of the Warner Company in presenting this land to the commonwealth and people of Pennsylvania. We thank you and, through you, the other officers, directors, and stockholders of the Warner Company. "For the State, the Pennsylvania Historical Commission has been authorized to assume the custody and management of Pennsbury.

"It is therefore very fitting that the chairman of the Commission should be present to receive the deed. I am making a double introduction so as not to interfere with the presentation. Mr. Charles Warner, president of the Warner Company, will present the deed for Pennsbury; Dr. James N. Rule, chairman of the Pennsylvania Historical Commission will receive the deed on behalf of the commonwealth."

Mr. Charles Warner stepping to the front of the platform presented the deed with appropriate remarks:

"Mr. Busch, ladies and gentlemen: The ceremonies of this afternoon in common with others commemorating the 250th Anniversary of William Penn's arrival in America, should be and are a powerful stimulant to wider recognition and keener appreciation of the lasting debt we owe our forefathers. The world is so much with us in its hurry and bustle, that we too little remember their vision and effort, which through years long past guided their compatriots through uncertain times. The opportunity of participating in today's ceremonies therefore has aroused my interest beyond my anticipation.

"By act of Assembly, April 26th,

1929, the Pennsylvania Historical Commission was authorized to acquire by gift from Warner Company, William Penn's Manor Estate, known as Pennsbury, to preserve and maintain it as a historical site to be known as the Pennsbury Memorial.

"Between the great man who established his country seat here at Pennsbury in 1682, and certain of my ancestors, direct and collateral, there were important business and personal relations, contemplation of which fact has aroused my mother, brothers and members of our families, to the opportunity and privilege afforded us today. I trust therefore it is not inappropriate to touch briefly on these relationships.

"On my father's side William Warner was one of nine to be selected for the first Provincial Assembly of Pennsylvania in 1681 and he served also in the second session in 1683. On my mother's side Caleb Pusey, with Samuel Carpenter and William Penn as partners, on the same date established a sawmill on Chester Creek, just outside of Chester. The old Pusey home still standing in that vicinity, and now in the possession of the Pennsylvania Historical Society is now regarded as the oldest building in the State. With these facts in mind you will appreciate fully the significance to some of us today in these ceremonies. We cannot help but feel a deep reverence for William Penn, that great character and welfare builder, and for his associates who planned the foundation for this commonwealth in that time so long ago.

"I can hardly imagine however, that Penn, practical planner though he was, as he surveyed these broad lands of his Manor Estate, had any conception of the part they would play in the structural development of the city and commonwealth he envisioned. In those days concrete was unknown, and the house built upon sand was a symbol of instability. Today much has been changed, and that sand and gravel so plentifully found on these lands, once owned by William Penn, through the aid of cement, has been employed in huge quantities to build the skyscrapers, the subways, the highways, and the bridges that distinguish Philadelphia and its environs.

"Thus in almost magic fashion, that which was once Penn's house, the very sand that was beneath his feet, is being passed into the stabilizing man-made rock, that at so many points adorns and supports the immense realities of the city and commonwealth, whose beginnings Penn himself both dreamed and laid.

"So now, I reach the definite step in the part assigned me today, and with a deep feeling of appreciation for the small part which the Warner Company is able to play, I turn over to the commonwealth of Pennsylvania the immediate acreage on which we stand, that it may be suitably preserved for posterity."

At this point Mr. Warner handed the deed for the property over to Dr. James N. Rule, president of the Pennsylvania Historical Commission.

Accepting the deed from Mr. Warner, Dr. Rule, who in addition to being president of the Pennsylvania Historical Commission is also State Superintendent of Public Instruction, said that Senator Clarence J. Buckman, during the 1929 session of the General Assembly, introduced and piloted through the General Assembly the act which permitted the acquisition of the site.

Dr. Rule read the act which is given elsewhere in this issue.

He then expressed appreciation to the donors, Charles Warner and the members of the Warner Sand Company, and to the men prominently identified with the movement to obtain and establish the memorial. Among the individuals he mentioned as actively associated with the project since its inception more than six years ago were: Charles Henry Moon, of Woodbourne, Bucks County, member of the Historical Commission, whose constant personal efforts largely were responsible for the goal reached in permanent acquisition by the State; Senator Joseph R. Grundy, of Bristol; and representatives Haines and Yeakel who were among the first to conceive the plan for the preservation of Pennsbury; to Oscar O. Bean, who handled the legal details of the transfer; and to the Welcome Society, and to the many others, including members of the Bucks County Historical Society and individuals interested in the perpetuation of the memory of William Penn.

"We dedicate Pennsbury today as a national patriotic shrine in honor of the Founder of our Commonwealth," Dr. Rule said. "It was here that William Penn lived and directed the adoption of his 'Fundamental Laws' that not only guide the people of Pennsylvania, but are firmly embedded in our federal constitution for the guidance of the nation. Pennsbury should and I have faith can be made to bear the same relation to Pennsylvania as Mount Vernon bears to the nation.

"I pledge for the State Historical Commission their undivided support in doing all within their power to establish Pennsbury Memorial as a monument to the life and noble contributions of Penn to our Commonwealth and to the Republic. The time that he spent here was all too brief, but he never forgot his obligation and desire to build firmly and permanently for his people. All that we can do by way of perpetuating his memory will be all too little in repayment of our great debt to him.

"At the present time there is little means with which to work and accomplish our ultimate aims. But as time goes on the General Assembly of the Commonwealth doubtless, as the Act obligates it to do, will provide for the restoration and beautification of this spot now so inaccessible and unattractive, but which holds so much in position.

"(Dr. Fackenthal's address will be published in installments in the Courier, the first of which appears elsewhere in the Courier today.)

FOOT HEALTH WONDERS OF THE FOOT

—by—
WILLIAM A. GROFF

Foot Specialist 329 Radcliffe St.

You may be surprised to learn that the number of small bones in both feet, fifty-two in all, is about one-fourth of all bones in the body. Let's look inside the foot machine. What a sight! Besides bones, we see all kinds of criss-crossing, fleshy bands, binding firmly the bones that must carry the whole body weight. Look at all those buffers, shock absorbers, the plumbing system with endless pipes to carry blood, the intricate telegraph system with thousands of nerves as wires, an automatic oiling system, and even ball bearings! Remember that every little part is a complex machine in itself, and the wonder of it, it all grows. Now you understand why engineers always marvel at the foot; why that remarkable genius, the glory of Florence, Leonardo Da Vinci, in studying bridge construction, looked for aid in observing the design of the foot. What machine can do what this one does? It grows itself, repairs itself and oils itself. A single foot is far more remarkable than all the world's machinery, because the combined efforts of every living engineer and mechanic could never produce a single toe, not to speak of a foot.—(Adv.)

Several Accidents Of Minor Nature

to the office of Dr. J. Fred Wagner by the driver of the car. The injuries were slight.

Four persons narrowly escaped death Saturday night when their car crashed with a truck on the Lincoln Highway at Parkland, broke through a guard rail and hung suspended by one fence cable over a 75-foot embankment.

Passing autoists leaped from their cars and pulled the machine to safety. The impact of the car had broken all but one of the cables, State Highway Patrolman Harry Lohr reported.

Mrs. Anna Shick, of Philadelphia, wife of Ernest Shick, 43, driver of the car, suffered cuts and bruises of the face and was treated by a nearby physician. Two children and the driver escaped injury.

The truck was driven by Charles Swankfield, 22 years old, of National Park, N. J. According to Patrolman Lohr, Shick was proceeding to Trenton and Swankfield was going toward Philadelphia when the collision occurred.

had good brakes, the truck was not carrying an excessive load and that he was on his side of the road.

Describing a tallspin which the plaintiff's car went into before the crash, Schadler said Rusk drove in front of him and attempted to cross the highway.

Both the defendant and the plaintiff testified that cars were lined on either side of the highway in front of the Catholic church making the road too narrow for travel.

Subjected to a stinging cross-examination by Attorney Webster Achey, Schadler insisted there was room enough for the plaintiff to pass had he kept to his side of the road.

used every effort at his command to change his views, and finally sent him to Cork in Ireland to take charge of two large estates, which William managed to his entire satisfaction, but alas! while in Cork he encountered his old friend, Thomas Lee, and was induced to attend Quaker meetings, at one of which on September 3, 1667, he was apprehended with others and sent to prison. From this time forward he identified himself with the Quakers in everything except costume.

On his return from England he again quarreled with his father for not removing his hat in his presence and in the presence of the King, whereupon his father again turned him out of doors. His preaching then became more intensive, and in 1668, he made his first appearance as an author in support of his religious views. His essays were contrary to law, and thought to be objectionable, and he was again arrested and sentenced to a prison term of nine months, from which he was released through the influence of the Duke of York. On his release from prison he was permitted to live under his father's roof, but forbidden to appear in his presence. His was then sent to Ireland a second time and on his return became fully reconciled with his father, with whom thereafter he lived on good terms.

In 1670, prior to his father's death, he and his friend William Mead, were arrested for preaching in the streets, and after a most remarkable trial in the Old Bailey Court in London, lasting four days, with ten magistrates on the bench, they were acquitted by the jury, whereupon the jurors were fined for refusing to find a verdict of guilty, and in default of payment were imprisoned until released by habeas corpus proceedings, and thus establishing the great principle of English law, that it is the right of a jury to judge of the evidence independent of the dictation or direction of the court.

Death of Admiral Penn

His father, the admiral, died September 16, 1670, leaving two sons, William and Richard, and one daughter, Margaret, who married Anthony Lowther. To Richard his second son, he bequeathed an annuity of £120 until he arrived at the age of 21 years, and then he was to have £4,000, he survived his father but three years. To William his eldest son, he bequeathed an estate yielding £1,500 yearly and large claims against the government, and thenceforth the cares of business and the duties of his lay ministry seem to have equally divided his time.

Six months later, in March 1671, while preaching in a meeting house in London he was again arrested and committed to the tower, and on being acquitted the magistrate requested him to take the oath of allegiance, which he knew very well he would refuse to do, whereupon he was sentenced to Newgate prison for six months. During his term of confinement he wrote and had published four treatises, one entitled "Sandy Foundations Shake," the other "No Cross, No Crown," two of the most famous polemics of the age. He was considered one of the most learned and able writers of his time.

On April 4, 1672, he married Gull-elma Maria, daughter of Sir William and Lady Mary Springett. The next few years were devoted to preaching and defending with his pen, the doctrines of the Quakers, for which his zeal never relaxed, whether in England before sailing to America, or while in America, or after his return to British soil. In 1686, partly through his influence, a proclamation was issued by King James II., for the release of those imprisoned on account of their religious beliefs, and 1,490 Quakers were set free.

These and other incidents in his life are well known to most of you, and are referred to here only by way of comparison to show the persecutions that he endured, as well to show the mind and heart of this truly great and good man, whose zeal and sincerity were but a preparation for bigger things and greater opportunities in carrying on his life-work. Did he have a vision then that the opportunity was near at hand, and that he was so soon to be placed in a position of trust and authority in the new world where he could offer an asylum to the oppressed, and could proclaim religious freedom to the nations of the world and to all kinds and conditions of men? A liberty of conscience, freedom of speech and of the press which we all enjoy today.

Pennsylvania Granted to William Penn

Charles II., King of England, Scotland, France and Ireland, on March 12, 1664, granted to his brother, James Duke of York and Albany, Earl of Ulster and afterwards King James II., "All of New England from the St. Croix to the Delaware." King Charles II., granted the province of Pennsylvania to William Penn, Esquire, by Royal Charter dated March 4, 1681. This grant was made to satisfy a claim of his father, Vice-Admiral Sir William Penn to whom the government had become indebted in the amount of £16,000. James, the Duke of York, under whom the Dutch had been dispossessed of all territory in America, of which they had become possessed, conveyed and confirmed the territory embraced in the royal charter to William Penn by two deeds bearing dates August 21 and 24, 1682. The so-called "three lower counties," Sussex, Kent and New Castle, comprising the entire state of Delaware, were included in the grant to William Penn. By an act of union passed December 7, 1682, they were annexed to the Province of Pennsylvania. In 1703 they obtained their liberty to secede, and thereafter were allowed a distinct assembly, but it was not until July 4, 1776, that Delaware was declared a free and independent state. There was some difficulty and litigation in fixing the boundary lines between Pennsylvania and Maryland, finally settled by survey of the Mason and Dixon line, begun in 1763, and finished in 1782, and between Pennsylvania and Connecticut resulting in wars, but these were in due time adjusted. Neither do I have time to enter into the connection that William Penn had with the province of West Jersey, when on August 16, 1680, a conveyance was made to him and five others for that territory. His experience therewith no doubt helped to attract his attention to this portion of the country, to which he first became interested in 1675.

Rights of the Indians to the Soil

The grant to William Penn made no reference to the rights of the aborigines to the soil, but it was part of Penn's plan to extinguish them by purchase. On April 8, 1681, he appointed his cousin, William Markham, deputy governor, and at once dispatched him to take possession of his newly acquired territory, to begin its colonization. Markham arrived in the Delaware in June of that year. Within three months after Markham left England William Penn appointed three commissioners, William Crispin, John Bezar and Nathaniel Allen, to proceed to Pennsylvania for the purpose of "settling of the present colony," and to deal with the Indians.

The surveys of land bought from the Indians, not only along the banks of the Delaware, but throughout the province, were predicated on the distance a man could travel in a given time. Markham did not conclude his first purchase from the Indians until more than a year after he arrived, viz: on July 15, 1682, which was about three months before the first arrival of William Penn. This first purchase is described in the deed as follows:

"Beginning at a certain white oak in the Land now in the tenure of John Wood, and by him called Gray Stones over against the falls of Delaware River, And soe from thence up by the River side to a corner marked Spruce Tree with the letter P, at the foot of a mountayne. And from the said corner marked Spruce Tree along the Ledge or foot of the mountaines west north west to a Corner white oak, marked with the letter P, standing by the Indian Path that Leads to an Indian Towne called Playwickey, and near the head of a Creek called Tow-sissipick, And from thence westward to the Creek called Neshamminys Creek, And along by the said Neshamminys Creek unto the River Delaware, alias Makerishickon; And soe bounded by the said River to the said first mentioned white oak in John Wood's Land.

This is the tract on part of which we are assembled today. Gray Stones, the land of John Wood, is in the present borough of Morrisville. On July 4, 1929, the Bucks County Historical Society placed a large bronze tablet on a monument to mark the beginning of this survey, and on October 17, 1925, the State Historical Commission erected a monument with bronze tablet alongside of the public road between Feasterville and Langhorne, to indicate the location of the Indian town of Playwickey. This first purchase included all of the townships of Bristol, Falls, Middletown, Newtown and Lower Makefield, and parts of Upper Makefield and Wrightstown.

Penn Conveys Property In Pennsylvania Prior to the First Indian Purchase

The two earliest deeds on record in Bucks County from William Penn are those of April 1, 1681, for 1,000 acres to Thomas Woolrich, and of July 27, 1681, for 500 acres to James Hill, both prior to the first concession from the Indians. It appears however, that there are earlier deeds, one of which was recently presented to the Bucks County Historical Society by Henry A. James, Esquire. It is for 250 acres in the Province of Pennsylvania, to Shad-rich Walley, dated March 22, 1681, and therefore but 18 days after the grant of King Charles II. The tract is in Newtown Township, and is noted on the map contained in Davis' History of Bucks County, Vol. 1, page 207. It is not recorded, and does not recite William Penn as Proprietary, but as a personal deed from William Penn of Wornimhurst, signed by William Penn and sealed with his personal seal. The warranty recited in the deed protects the purchaser "from all manner of Titles, and Claymes of any Indian or Native of the said Tract or province." The deed is here for inspection.

America's Max

By HARDIN BURNLEY

Max Baer

IF SCHMELING FIGHTS BAER, IT WILL BE MAX VS. MAX, AND MAY THE BEST MAX WIN!!

THE FORMER BUTCHER BOY FROM LIVERMORE, CAL. WANTS A CRACK AT SCHMELING OR SHARKEY

It seems to be pretty certain that Herr Max Schmeling will get the first crack at heavyweight champion Jack Sharkey when the Big Business Man from Boston decides to defend his title, the probable date being next June. In spite of the fact that the last Sharkey-Schmeling "battle" was the most uninteresting big fight in years, there is a real demand for a return bout. This is because a lot of people who heard the fight over the radio agreed with Joe Jacobs that Schmeling had been robbed, thus creating a big controversy over the merits of the decision.

Many people think that Schmeling has earned a return bout with Sharkey because (1) he stopped Mickey Walker in 8 rounds last September, and (2) the decision which cost him the title was highly questionable.

However, there are many objections that could be advanced against Schmeling's right to another title bout. The main objection is that he and Sharkey would be likely to put on another "raggy" bout, and that might kill interest in the heavyweight divisions for quite a while. Then again, I would like to see Schmeling fight a more formidable opponent than the battle-scarred, undersized Walker before he is given first crack at the title.

What about Max Baer? Baer's virtual knockout of Ernie Schaaf and his Kayo of "Tuffy" Griffiths were both more impressive victories than Schmeling's win over Walker. The former butcher boy from Livermore, Cal., is potentially a better fighter than Germany's Max, in the opinion of veteran fight observers; but in the past Baer's playboy tactics and his lackadaisical attitude in the ring made it appear that he would never fulfill his early promise.

Then, a little more than a year ago, Baer got married. That started the change. Husband Baer cut out the playboy stuff, and started to put his nose to the grindstone. He actually trained for his fights. Two gruelling twenty-round bouts with Paulino and Levinsky added vastly to Baer's store of experience, and he ran up a string of victories, including Johnny Risko among his victims.

He still seemed to lack ferocity in the ring, however, until the bout with Schaaf a couple of months ago. In the last few rounds of that scrap, the ex-playboy battered away at the durable Schaaf with a truly Dempsey-like fury. Baer proved that his newly-found fighting spirit was not merely a flash in the pan by annihilating the game "Tuffy" Griffiths in his next scrap, finishing Griffiths in the seventh round with a savage flurry of wallop.

Baer seems to have really found himself at last, and from now on he will be very hard to beat—unless his perennial managerial troubles upset the temperamental Californian.

Schmeling and Baer should put up a sensational scrap if they ever meet, since both the American Max and Germany's Max are Kayo punchers who pack potent sleep producers, while at the same time both have proved themselves durable and tough.
